Design Concept:

This design intends to bring the outdoors inside, providing a multisensory experience while creating a space that strengthens the human-nature connection. That will help promote well-being mentally, physically, and emotionally for those occupying the home. This house's layout has designated zones a social, work, and rest area to solve the challenge of having more privacy, flexibility, and structure restored into a home. Now to reconnect and strengthen the human-nature connection inspiration from the landscape in Jalisco, Mexico. By using various blue and green shades inspired by the Agave Azul (blue Agave). As well as using natural fibers, textures, and patterns like, clay flooring, birch wood, oak wood, stucco, stone, and textiles made from plant fibers. Ensuring the materials and finishes used throughout the home is not toxic to the residents, providing them with clean and healthy space. To open up the spaces in the home, the use of bi-fold windows will provide lucious and vibrant views of the landscape and enhance natural light coming in. The use of indoor plants will serve to provide natural oxygen inside the home. The inspiration for furniture selection comes from the strong and angular forms from the stalk to the more organic shape of the pineapple. Also known as the heart of the Agave. A combination of modern and contemporary furnishings and accessories will be utilized throughout the home. It is overall creating a space that connects the homeowners with nature from the comfort of their home. We all deserve to live in a healthy and comfortable home.
